

TRIAL OF HALL-BAUM CASE AT THE JANUARY QUARTER SESSIONS COURT.

Results in Verdict: Guilty of Wantonly Pointing, but Not Guilty of Wantonly Discharging Gun.

January term of court, 1923, will be remembered by the interesting case tried before President Judge D. P. McPherson and his associates, E. P. Miller and H. B. Pearson, of Commonwealth vs. Charles B. Baum. The trial of the case began on Monday morning and the verdict was not reached until Wednesday night. The court room was packed with an audience most of the time and by those interested in hunting throughout the county.

Charles B. Baum is a traveling game warden of the State Game Commission and the Grand Jury at the January court this week had found a true bill against Baum charging in a first count wantonly pointing a gun and in the second count wantonly discharging a gun, the witnesses on the indictment being J. Edward Hall, Director of the Poor of the county, and his son. The trial of the case began as soon as the indictment was returned by Grand Jury.

The offense alleged took place on the last day of deer hunting season, Friday, Dec. 15. The prosecution in the case was J. Edward Hall, who was represented by J. Donald Swope, Esq., and Robert E. Wible, Esq., and the defendant was represented by Paul J. Sherwood, Esq., of Harrisburg.

The testimony of the prosecution was to establish that the defendant game warden had called to J. Edward Hall to halt and then fired a shot, which Hall said he heard whiz in the air above him and then later when the game warden came up to him that he had a revolver which was pointed at him and never discharged.

The cross-examination brought out the fact that J. Edward Hall had been a member of a deer camp, where the full quota of deer had been legally killed some days previous to the day upon which the trouble occurred with Baum. That on the latter day Hall had on his hunting suit with license on his back and that he was carrying a gun loaded with balls, and tracks had been found by the game warden in the snow following the tracks of a deer. After Hall had been accused of illegally hunting he admitted the fact to warden and Seth Gordon, Secretary of the State Game Commission, who was with the warden, and the warden went with Hall to his house so that he could get the money with which to pay the $100 fine the officers said they were willing to accept for the infractions of the law was admitted, and that Hall at the time paid $50 of the fine. The position of the prosecution was that though he had admitted illegal hunting and paid his fine, the warden had no right to wantonly fire his gun and point his gun at him, and the testimony of prosecution was directed toward these points.

The defense was that there was no wantonly firing of a gun at Hall and no wantonly pointing of a gun at him, that when Hall caught sight of them he broke into a run, which latter explained was to warn his son, who was carrying a gun without his license tag, which had been left in the house. The warden and Seth Gordon testified that when Hall started to run Baum shouted "halt," and when Hall did not stop, a shot was fired into the air, when Hall stopped and both denied that Baum had pointed a pistol at Hall later, that when they reached Hall, the warden handed his gun to Seth Gordon and took Hall's gun to discover if it loaded with ball cartridges and that the explanation offered that he was hunting foxes and rabbits would not answer. Then the admissions of illegal hunting were testified to by which Hall turned over $50 of a fine and was to send the remaining $50 and instead began the prosecution.

A great deal of feeling came to the surface as manifested in the scrapping attitude of counsel and objections and interruptions were frequent. Upon the cross-examination of Warden Baum, a number of other incidents got into the trial of his handling of others whom he suspected of illegal hunting. Throughout the trial, in between the lines as it were, it seemed that there were hunters who had it in for the warden for things that he had done. All sympathy was made for Hall along these lines that could be got into the case. It was admitted that the money he had paid was gone without any chance of recovery.

The verdict of the jury as brought in shortly after eight o'clock in the evening was that defendant was guilty of wantonly pointing a gun and not guilty of wantonly discharging a gun, and that the costs were to be divided between defendant and prosecution. Upon inquiry by the Court that the action of the jury as to the costs had not entered into their decision as to the charges, the verdict as entered by direction of the Court was guilty of wantonly pointing a gun and not guilty of wantonly discharging a gun. The Court had instructed the jury that if they found the defendant guilty of any charge they had nothing to do with the costs, but they had not understood.

A motion for a new trial and in arrest of the verdict was immediately made by Attorney Sherwood.

It makes one curious when a verdict is reached of not guilty but pay the costs, or guilty and an attempt is made to put part of the costs on the prosecution as in the Hall-Baum case, and according to what is heard, the jury must have concluded that Hall had lost almost enough in losing $50, and that if the game warden was allowed to go scot free he might ride the people of the mountain too hard, but if his comb was cut just a little it would be better.

Of the four cases on the trial list of civil cases but one was tried, Chas. Hull vs. Harry E. Bowers, an action of trespass for damages. The jury was chosen late Wednesday afternoon. The testimony was taken on Thursday and the same afternoon the attorneys for parties, J. D. Swope, Esq., for defendant, and J. Hooper, Esq., of York, for plaintiff made their speeches to the jury.

The case of Hull vs. Bowers, was before a jury once before, several years ago. At that time when the case of the plaintiff had been presented to jury the Court sustained a motion of defendant for a compulsory nonsuit on the ground of contributing negligence of plaintiff. The plaintiff had been riding on the work car of the Hanover and Littlestown trolley with his legs hanging over the sides. The defendant driving a truck out of an alley in Littlestown did so in a way as to collide with the work car and the legs of the plaintiff were caught when the two came together. The contributing negligence found in the first trial was the position of the plaintiff on the work car. The Supreme Court on appeal did not sustain this view and sent case back for trial. The plaintiff and six witnesses gave the details of the accident and plaintiff told how long he was confined to house by reason of accident, and that his wages at the time were $1.80 a day or $10.80 a week, and that there were results which gave him a permanent limp. The defendant presented all the extenuating circumstances of the case, and jury was charged by the Court on Friday morning.

At the opening of the January court on Monday the constables were called. There was only one constable made a report, in the first ward of Gettysburg, of his visit to licensed places. No constable in county had any report to make, no report as to roads, or sign-boards. It is doubtful whether there has been any court at which there was nothing to report by the peace officers.

The Grand Jury was next called and sworn, Arthur C. Griest being appointed foreman.

Harvey B. Slonaker, constable in Fairfield, was appointed upstaff for the week.

The first criminal case was that of Com. vs. Robt. Gill. He had been before the court on charge of kindling a fire and was let go on his parole to leave the county and never return. He had made several trips back and was annoying our citizens and he was brought before the Court for violation of his parole and was sentenced to the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than 11 months nor more than one year, to pay $1 fine and costs of prosecution.

The Grand Jury acted on three bills of indictment.

Com. vs. Charles B. Baum, charge pointing and discharging gun, was found a true bill.

Com. vs. Anthony Deardorff, charged by his wife with assault and battery, was found a true bill.

Com. vs. Ralph Sherman, charged with fornication and bastardy was found a true bill.

JACKSON DAY CELEBRATION BIG DEMOCRATIC CELEBRATION IN GETTYSBURG JAN. 30.

Wilson Sends Felicitations—Speeches by John A. McSparran, Congressman Glatfelter and Others.

Adams County Democracy has answered the call of Cordell Hull, National Democratic Chairman, for Jackson Day events in which Democrats should get together for the promising campaigns ahead. County Chairman J. W. McDannell and a big committee from the local Democratic Club have perfected plans for a big Jackson Day dinner and celebration on Tuesday evening. The event is a free event and a large crowd of Democrats from all parts of the county are expected.

A number of invitations have been sent out to men prominent in the party and acceptances have been received that assure one of the greatest Democratic events ever held in the county.

Congressman-elect S. F. Glatfelter writes that he "will be delighted to meet with Democrats on Jackson Day," and that "I feel that your effort is a fitting climax to a most glorious victory and the beginning of a new era for Democracy in York-Adams District."

John A. McSparran, Democratic candidate for Governor in the last campaign, writes that he wants "to help you folks out and so am coming."

Robert E. Pattison, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor last fall, regrets he can not be present, and adds as to the Jackson Day celebration:

"These celebrations in Pennsylvania this year are very significant for they show an awakened party and I believe our party is in better condition now than for some years past and that it will continue to grow stronger as time goes along. Please allow me to congratulate you on the fine showing the ticket made in Adams county and let me assure you that your efforts are greatly appreciated by all the candidates. Wishing you every success in your Jackson Day celebration and in your work to keep Adams county in the Democratic column."

Democratic State Chairman Austin E. McCullough writes that he expects to attend banquet Tuesday evening, Jan. 30.

Henry C. Niles, the Democratic candidate for the Supreme Court Justice, writes that "it will give me pleasure to accept invitation for Tuesday evening, Jan. 30."

Ex-Congressman A. R. Brodbeck expresses his appreciation of the invitation to be present and adds: "It gives me pleasure to accept same and I will endeavor to be present upon the occasion" and sends "his kindest regards and best wishes for a successful and profitable gathering of Adams county's Democratic hosts."

John A. Stover, Secretary of Congressman-elect Glatfelter, sends word that Mrs. Hayward, of York, and some other women Democratic speakers can be expected to be present.

The Jackson Day celebration as planned will consist of a dinner in the banquet hall of the Order of Independent Americans. Several quarters of beef will be roasted and an inviting menu will be laid. The invited guests and speakers will be dined at 5 o'clock and the dinner will be served to all attending from all parts of the county. At 7.30 the speaking will begin in the court room of the Court House.

John Randolph Bolling, secretary to Woodrow Wilson, writes: "J. E. McDonnell: Mr. Wilson asks me to say that he wishes most sincerely it were possible for him to accept the kind invitation of his fellow Democrats of Adams county to the celebration they are planning for Jan. 30. But at the present stage of his convalescence it would be unwise for him to undertake the trip to Gettysburg and so he must content himself by expressing his warm appreciation and satisfaction of the courtesy extended to him. Mr. Wilson sends to you and your associates his warmest greetings and best wishes."

Gettysburg Boy at State College.

The "Penn State Farmer," a publication put out by the students of the agricultural department of the Pennsylvania State College, will have a booth at the annual Farm Products Show in Harrisburg this week, as part of the college exhibit. Mr. Mizel and the other farmer representatives at the farm show will assist the department in circulating trial packages at the show. Last year Mr. Mizel was teaching at the Clearspring, Md., High School, and went to State College at opening of the fall term.

NEW GOVERNOR TAKES OFFICE.

Pinchot Inaugurated—The Inaugural Speech—Message to Legislature.

Gifford Pinchot was inaugurated last week as the twenty-ninth Governor of Pennsylvania, with the usual ceremonial display.

In his inaugural speech he presented his program in following resume: To drive all saloons out of Pennsylvania.

To prevent and punish bootlegging. To maintain and secure good laws for the protection of working children, women and men.

To safeguard the industries of Pennsylvania and promote the prosperity of the State.

To advance the interests of the farmers, who feed us all.

To give our children the best schools in America.

To check centralization and give more home rule to cities, counties, townships and school districts.

To maintain the direct primary and protect the rights of women voters.

To meet the just needs of those who served in the world war.

To revise and equalize taxes, establish a budget system, and reorganize the State Government on a business basis.

To keep the expenses of the State within its income.

To get a dollar's worth of services for every dollar spent.

The Cabinet so far announced is composed of the following:

Attorney General: George W. Woodruff. Philadelphia; deputies, Robert L. Wallace, New Castle, and John N. English, Pittsburgh.

Commissioner of Public Welfare: Dr. Ellen C. Porter, Philadelphia.

Superintendent of Printing and Binding: A. Nevin Detrich, Chambersburg.

Chief of Mines: Joseph J. Walsh, Wilkes-Barre.

Forestry Commissioner: Robert Y. Stuart, Carlisle.

Superintendent of State Police: Lynn G. Adams, Scranton.

Banking Commissioner: Peter Cameron, Wellsboro.

Adjutant General: Frank D. Beary, Allentown.

Superintendent of Public Instruction: Dr. Thomas E. Finegan, New York, until June 1st.

Paul D. Wright, Highway Commissioner, of Erie.

John S. Fisher, Secretary of Commerce, when that department is created by the legislature.

Nathan R. Buller is retained as Fish Commissioner.

Secretary of Agriculture: Frank P. Willett, Delaware county.

Governor Pinchot threw into the works of the Legislature a monkey-wrench budget message, in which he points out that the treasury deficit is in excess of twenty-nine millions and that the way out is to cut down appropriations for the next two years.

He states that the State of Pennsylvania has failed to live within its means by the huge sum of twenty-nine millions and that we owe that much and must postpone payment and cut down appropriations for the next two years until the balance is on the right side of the ledger. He reduces his salary from $18,000 to $10,000 for the next two years.

Politically, it looks as though there was going to be a play to the galleries on the question of driving saloons out of the State, and economy to arrest national attention, until the Republican nomination for President has been made. Of course, it may all end in talk, newspaper camouflage. But suppose it was the real thing, and the State Police was put on the job in dead earnest. Plain clothes men could comb the State and get an astonishing array of names and make it unhealthy for such to be engaged in any kind of wet business. Oh yes, we will see what we will see.

DEATHS.

KNOW OF HEART'S FUNCTIONS

Papyrus Proves That Ancient Egyptian Physicians Were Fully Conversant With Important Organ.

Egyptian physicians in the days of the Hebrew patriarchs knew the heart is the center of a system, throughout which its pulsations are felt. They performed operations, made diagnoses, catalogued cases and verdicts, and pursued investigations in a scientific spirit, according to a study of the Edward Smith papyrus made by Prof. J. H. Breasted of the University of Chicago.

Professor Breasted declared the ancient document lay in a coffin for "some three and a half millenniums." Pointing out that it was discovered by an American, Edwin Smith, the Chicago orientalist asserted it contained "incomparably the most important body of medical knowledge which has survived to us from the ancient Orient anywhere."

The passage about the heart reads in part: "There is in it (the heart) a canal leading to every member of the body. Concerning these, if the physician places the fingers on the back of the head, on the hands, on the pulse, on the legs, he discovers the heart, for the heart leads to every member and it beats in the canals of every member."

ARE YOU NERVOUS?

Maybe There is a Cause for it that You Can Correct.

Many who suffer from backache and weak kidneys are unnaturally irritable, fretful and nervous. Not only does constant backache "get on the nerves," but bad kidneys fail to eliminate all the uric acid from the system, and uric acid irritates the nerves, keeping one "on edge," and causing rheumatic, neuralgic pains. When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, the medicine so well recommended by Gettysburg people. Read this Gettysburg resident's statement:

Mrs. Chas. Hunter, 127 W. High St., says: "I was never bothered in a serious way with kidney trouble, but a number of years ago my kidneys weren't in proper condition. Sharp pains darted through my back and my trouble made housework very hard. My back ached most of the time, but the pains were worse in the morning, directly after getting up. My troubles were many and my sight was blurred by specks. I felt irritable and was inclined to be nervous. My kidneys acted irregularly. I purchased Doan's Kidney Pills at the People's Drug Store, and two boxes roused all these signs of kidney complaint from me."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that J. S. Hunter had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Clinging Vine

By R. RAY BAKER

Jim Reynolds was in a quandary, and it was because he loved a girl. The quandary arose from the fact that she was not of the type of modern woman he always had admired, the kind he had set his heart on marrying—if he ever married. Indeed, she was the reverse; she was the soft, fluffy, velvety, clinging-vine sort, and for that species he never had had any time.

Jim admired the capable, practical, striding, self-reliant type of girl who can stand up to a man and read him the "riot act" (Jim's own term for it), and, if need be, give him a punch on the nose. The young woman that rowed, skated, swam and performed gymnastic feats always had appealed to him whenever the idea feminine received any consideration from his active business mind.

He was a bachelor of thirty, not versed in the ways of the fair, and not particularly interested. He was assistant manager of the Wells Electric Pump company, and his duties kept him busy from breakfast to dinner. But in the evening newspaper he would read about some woman sticking a batpin into a footpad, another routing a porch-climber with a rolling pin, or another knocking a "masher" off the sidewalk, and he would exclaim: "Bravo! That's the kind of girl for me!"

But as Jim was neither a footpad, porch-climber nor masher, he never came in contact with such an admirable person. The beribboned, dimpled, fluffy-haired girls who played engineer to typewriters in the pump office were his only feminine associates; and, "like a fool," as he rebuked himself many times, he went and fell for one of them.

Jim fought against it, but to no avail. He was not master of his own destiny. Mazie was to all appearances a soft, fluffy, velvety, clinging vine, but also she was pink-cheeked, graceful, smily and altogether charming.

Against his better judgment, Jim just couldn't help taking Mazie to lunch occasionally, and once he overstepped all bounds of reason and entertained her at a theater. When he got home he berated himself in harsh terms all the time he was undressing, and all night long he tossed and turned and hated himself. And in the morning went down to the office with a frown against the world—and lost it when Mazie tripped into the room.

Hence the quandary. Jim's heart said, "Marry Mazie," and his common sense, bolstered by that long-nursed desire for a capable, self-reliant mate said: "Have a care: she's a clinging vine."

Of course, he did not know that he could marry Mazie, but he believed she cared for him. Indeed, they were "quite chummy," and twice Jim had been on the point of proposing, only to be dissuaded by the cold, calculating judgment that had made him a good business man. He was rather nice looking himself, and, although he was not connected, he was quite sure Mazie would have him if he pressed his case. Between you and me, he was right; she loved him, too.

Along came a two weeks' vacation and Jim decided the opportunity was at hand to escape the clutches of the clinging vine. He went fishing with a friend, dressed in old clothes, smoked strong tobacco, and had a rough row. When he returned he was confident that the spell Mazie had cast over him was broken.

The night before returning to work he had dinner with the companion of the fishing excursion, and was invited to spend the night in the spare bed. The friend lived in a big apartment house all by himself, not a great distance from the office.

Seated in a comfortable chair, while the friend played music a la disc, Jim eagerly digested a paper. He had been separated so long from the busy world that news acted on his brain like port-house on an empty stomach.

"That's the stuff!" Jim suddenly exclaimed, in the midst of a grand opera concert. "Here's a girl found a burglar in her apartment, held a revolver against his ribs with one hand, called the police with the other, and brought about his arrest. That's the kind of a girl for you! Why can't I get acquainted with one like that?"

This brought Mazie into his thoughts and there were some peculiar disturbances in the region of his heart. Yes, he loved Mazie yet, but he wouldn't yield. If only she were not a clinging vine!

About nine o'clock Jim became thirsty and went out in the hall for a drink of water. The friend kept a supply in the refrigerator, which was located in the hall, and Jim went after it himself, not wishing to disturb his host, who was preparing a fish dinner in the kitchenette.

Jim obtained his drink and started back to the apartment, and just then the lights faded out.

"There go the lights again," he growled as he felt his way along the hall. "I wonder if the power company will ever be in shape to carry its load? About once a week they fall down on the job."

Presently he bumped up against a door, turned the knob and entered. He stumbled over a chair and received a blow in the kneecap that produced another growl.

"That's funny; I don't remember leaving a chair in front of the door. But then I didn't expect—"

"Keep perfectly motionless!" said a soft, sweet voice in peremptory tones. "If you budge I'll shoot!"

Against his temple a cold object was pressed; so Jim remained as motionless as he could with his legs wabbling erratically.

"Auntie," called the sweet voice. "Please call the police. I've caught a burglar!"

From another room came a faint cry of consternation, then a scrambling sound, and presently Jim heard another feminine voice summoning the police.

"Now sit down!" Jim was ordered, and he sat. That cold object had been removed from his temple, but he could feel it boring into his ribs.

"Bring me some rope, auntie!" his captor called next, and when these instructions had been obeyed, Jim was bound securely on the chair.

The woman who held him captive was almost invisible in the darkness, only faintly could he discern her, but it was a rather diminutive person. She drew another chair close to the one in which Jim was seated, and settled herself there while the weapon in her hand continued to rest against the prisoner.

Jim was perspiring profusely, although he felt a cold wave permeate him now and then. This was a terrible predicament. She thought he was a robber, the police were summoned and were now on the way, and—and that one might go off at any time. Confound it! Why did they let women keep guns? And why had he let him self blunder into the wrong apartment?

He decided his only escape was an explanation, but how could he explain while this woman held a gun against him and threatened to pull the trigger if he offered to break silence?

"If you'll let me explain—" he began.

"Silence!" said the soft voice, and the pressure of the weapon became stronger. Then she called:

"Auntie, are you sure there are no candles? Better look again."

"Sure," was the reply. I looked—"

Then the lights came on.

Jim blinked and looked—into the eyes of soft, fluffy, velvety Mazie Holmes, who held the handle of a table fork against his ribs.

"Good gracious!" she gasped. "It's Jim! Auntie, call off the police and then come here and meet Jim." And to Jim she explained:

"I've been staying with her the last few nights. She's so fussy—afraid of burglars, you know."

Dostoevsky.
He makes no appeal to the passions of his readers, as Beethoven in his later works makes none to the mere sense of sound. He was an artist purified by suffering as saints are purified by it; for through it he attained to that complete disinterestedness which is as necessary to the artist as to the saint. Whenever a man sees people and things in relation only to his own personal wants and appetites, he cannot use them as subject-matter for art. Dostoevsky's art to free every man and everybody from this relation more completely, perhaps, than any writer known to us. Not even vanity or fear, nor any theory begotten of them, perverted his view of human life. In his art, at any rate, he achieved that complete liberation, which is aimed at by the wisdom of the East; and his heroes exhibit it by his conduct.—A. Cotton-Brock.

Org. of Tea.
Although record is lacking, it is believed that a coarse variety of tea plant existed in Japan from time immemorial. The custom of using its leaves as beverage, however, seems to have come from China with the introduction of Buddhism. The story runs that the use of tea in China had been known since the early times, especially among the Buddhist monks, by whom it was used in order to keep them awake during their vigils. In the Twelfth century, Eisai, a celebrated Japanese priest, brought a host of directions from China for the culture and curing of tea, together with a jar of choice seed, and from that time the beverage came into favor among the upper classes. Tea has subsequently become extensive, and its use as a beverage gradually universal.—East and West News.

It has been exonerated from the reputation long attaching to it.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

THE SECRET OF GLAMIS CASTLE

THE grim walls of Glamis castle, in Scotland, have concealed a mystery for a number of centuries—concealed it so well that no hint of what it is or whence its origin, has ever been definitely brought to light. But that the existence of the secret is well known throughout the kingdom is apparent from Sir Walter Scott's reference to a secret chamber in the castle which "by the law or custom of the family, must be known only to three persons—the earl, the heir and the third in the line of succession!" "The popular version," adds the famous novelist, "is that there is some horrible remembrance connected with the secret which has existed for the past two or three hundred years."

One writer claims that the mystery concealed in the secret chamber was a human being—half frog and half man—and recounts the story of the Countess of Glamis, who finally succeeded in penetrating to the hidden room, only to die of horror at what she found there. This story, while apparently well authenticated by writers of the period, has little foundation in fact—apart from the detail of the sudden and unexplained death of the countess, who may have come to her end in any one of a number of ways, and, in order to cover up the manner of her assassination or accidental death, it is more than possible that the story of the "chamber of horrors" was spread broadcast through the surrounding country.

Another version of the secret of the castle appears in an old history of Scotland, where it is stated that "there is one chamber in the castle in which, some centuries ago, two gamblers were walled in and condemned to continue their ghastly play, and where the rattling of the dice is still to be heard. The earl of Strathmore and his eldest son, Lord Glamis, must each hear this tale, and it is related that the present lord has not forgotten the effect it had upon him." But, unless stage-managed in a manner worthy of Belasco—with bluish lights, skeleton hands, and a dice box suspended in mid-air—it is hard to see how the mere sight of a room where a not unusual torture was practiced centuries ago, could have such a profound effect upon those who visited it, nor how it would lead to such extreme measures for the preservation of secrecy.

Still another story, and one which appears to possess elements of horror and at least an approach of plausibility not to be found in the other legends, is that which appeared in print in England only a few years ago: "In the Castle of Glamis," stated the writer, an eminent authority on such subjects, "is a secret chamber which holds (or is reputed to hold) a monster who is heir to the title and property, but who is so hideous that it is necessary to keep him out of sight and possession. The secret is known to only three persons, because, as the deformed man is the rightful earl of Strathmore, he must be concealed in order to safeguard the title of the present earl, but the same misshapen aspect which renders his imprisonment essential has also prolonged his life far beyond the appointed span."

"That there is a secret room in the castle is a fact well known, not only in the neighborhood, but to all who have made an examination of the structure. Placed below the level of the ground, it is apparently reached through a staircase, concealed behind the paneled walls of one of the many large rooms on the first floor. Those who retail the story of the monster supposed still to inhabit this chamber declare that it is half reptile and half human, thus accounting for the fact that it has survived far more than the usual span of a man's life—while others declare that the creature died years ago, but that its mummified body remains as a warning to the new heirs that their tenancy of office is founded on deception, for the tales about the chamber agree in only one particular, that its occupant is the true earl of Strathmore."

The truth or falsity of these suppositions has never been settled, but the fact remains that Glamis castle hides a secret of some kind, which will never be disclosed until the old pile is torn stone from stone.

Why Buy Oil Stock?

You can buy an interest in a lease and drilling well for $25.00, or 4 interests in 4 wells on separate leases for $100.00. All these leases are adjacent to or join producing wells. According to the law of averages in these fields, three out of four wells should be producers. Under this plan, a 20 barrel well will pay $9.50 per month on each $25 interest, or a 100 barrel well will pay $47.50 per month on each $25 interest. You will receive your proportionate share of money from the sale of oil regularly each month. Send your check to-day for one or more interests and if you are dissatisfied within ten days after receiving full particulars, guarantee to return your money. Quick action is necessary, as the number of interests unsold is limited. Make all checks and inquiries to JOS. F. STEVENS, Trustee, 740 Land Title Building, Philadelphia, Pa.
